History Compass 10/11 (2012): 838–851, 10.1111/hic3.12009

The Legal Status of Piracy in Medieval Europe

Emily Sohmer Tai*
Queensborough Community College, CUNY

Abstract

This article discusses the history of maritime theft, or piracy, in medieval Europe, not so much as a crime but rather as a case study in legal pluralism: the operation of competing systems of law across a common region. Although scholarship has often interpreted sources for medieval European piracy through the filter of early modern conditions, the parameters of how disputes over piracy were settled within the conflicting legal systems of medieval Europe may have heuristic implications for understanding twenty-first century piracy. On the one hand, statutes of royal and civic polities across medieval Europe uniformly adhered to Roman legal precedents in condemning piracy as a capital crime. On the other hand, selective campaigns of maritime predation, referred to in the Latin sources as sailing ad piraticam or in cursum, (hence the term corsair), were sanctioned by medieval European polities when directed against political and economic rivals. Legal and narrative sources for maritime theft nevertheless indicate that piracy was often conflated with the operation of enemy corsairs in a manner that carried implications for the imposition of capital penalties on maritime marauders as well as for merchants who attempted to obtain compensation, or restitution, for cargo seized in a corsair raid from polities charged with authorizing their operations. Attempts to obtain restitution could also be complicated by commercial patterns subtly interwoven with maritime theft.

The recent resurgence of maritime theft off the coast of Somalia has revived popular interest in piracy's so-called ''Golden Age.''[1] Indeed, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton termed such raiding ''a seventeenth-century crime'' requiring ''twenty-first century solutions.''[2] Clinton's conceptualization of piracy as little more than waterborne larceny affirms the legal definition of piracy established by the United Nations Convention on the High Seas,[3] as well as the classic formulation in Roman law, which denounced any maritime venture launched in the 'Mediterranean lake' (mare nostrum) without imperial sanction as piracy.[4] The pirate, with no legitimate sanction, was thus justly subject to a system of universal law, exerted over an extra-territorial, maritime space.

From the era of the Latin Crusades to the mid-nineteenth-century Treaty of Paris, however, numbers of Europeans practiced a legitimate form of maritime assault explicitly in order to further collective, political, objectives. Empowered to varying degrees as admirals, corsairs in the Mediterranean; zeeraubers (sea-rovers) in the Germanic-language sources; or privateers, in seventeenth-century English admiralty records, these adventurers received official sanction to intercept and appropriate cargo aboard ships flying the flag of political and economic rivals.[5] During and between periods of belligerence, politically-sanctioned maritime interruption functioned as a 'substitute', in Braudel's phrase, 'for declared war' amongst the peer polities of medieval and early modern Europe and the Middle East—Muslim and Christian alike.

In a process said to have begun over the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, European polities elaborated a legal definition of piracy as the capital crime of conducting maritime raids—whether coastal or on the 'high seas'—without political sanction. Such a definition was critical to European polities' articulations of sovereignty, over maritime space, and over persons.[6] In the standard narrative, early modern European states moved from distinguishing between sanctioned and unsanctioned maritime theft to substituting standing navies for corsairs, effectively suppressing unsanctioned piracy and protecting trade.[7] This article contends, however, that one gains a better understanding of this crystallization period when the conditions of medieval Europe are studied through the lens of what legal anthropologists have termed legal pluralism: the operation of competing systems of law throughout a common region.[8] Although scholars have long acknowledged that medieval Europe was governed by a variety of overlapping and incongruent legal systems, discussions of conflict between them has centered, most often, upon friction between secular and ecclesiastical systems of law within the ius comune.[9] Competitive claims advanced by secular jurisdictions over open, maritime space could, nevertheless, engender significant conflict over the identification of pirates, and the resolution of disputes over maritime seizure, even where correspondences of legal practice, or norms, could be discerned across discrete jurisdictions.[10] Subjective assignment of terms like 'pirate', 'corsair', and 'zeerauber', accordingly furnish evidence of the simultaneous operation of competing systems of law that allowed medieval piracy to lie in the eye—or, rather, with the law—of the beholder.

Piracy in law and practice

To be sure, certain aspects of Roman practice exerted a profound influence upon the legal traditions that developed to regulate maritime theft in the Middle Ages.[11] Still, statutes redacted in the medieval maritime republics of Venice, Genoa, and Pisa, as well as the monarchies of Catalonia-Aragon, England, and France, all distinguished between a sanctioned admiral and a criminal pirate by considering whether the commander of a sea-voyage ad piraticam or in cursum had received authorization to sail from the polity claiming sovereignty over the port from which his ship had launched.[12] In the monarchies of England, Catalonia-Aragon, and Castile-Léon, admirals and other corsair captains who had received such authorization enjoyed varying degrees of judicial authority.[13] Pirates, who lacked such authorization, meanwhile faced capital penalties. Indeed, medieval narrative sources indicate that sanctioned corsairs might well assert their judicial prerogatives to execute any 'pirates' they encountered.[14] But the neat distinction between legal 'admirals' and illegal 'pirates' was not always maintained in practice. The Jutgamen de la Mar or Les Costumes de Oléron, which scholars believe guided practice along the French Atlantic coast between the twelfth and seventeenth centuries, for example, equated the quality of 'being a pirate' with religious and/or political enmity—a justification for corsairing—when it indicated that the looting of a shipwreck, ordinarily forbidden, could be permitted in two instances: '…if the said ship exercised pillaging, or [if]…they were pirates, or sea-rovers, or Turks, or enemies to our sacred Catholic faith…'.[15] The thirteenth-century Catalan Consolat de mar similarly conflated enmity and piracy, calling maritime thieves 'almiralls', 'males gents' and 'lenys armats de enemichs'.[16] The fourteenth- and fifteenth-century maritime code of the Hanseatic League, meanwhile anticipated piratical aggression from enemy corsairs, whom it named as 'zeerovere'.[17] Flexible and subjective views of piracy could also configure royal proclamations. In 1324, for example, Edward II of England appointed John Crombwell as an '..admiral of our coasts..' but characterized counterparts with whom Crombwell would contend as 'admirals and pirates...'.[18]

In practice, the appointment of an admiral sometimes assumed the parameters of a feudal office, but at other times took on more mercenary overtones. The Siete Partidas likened an admiral's investiture to the solemnities of knighthood, stipulating a ritual that involved receipt of a ring, a sword, and a standard.[19] The Crònica of the former Catalan corsair Ramon Muntaner (1270–1336), describes a similar ceremony in which Roger de Lauria received 'an admiral's baton' from Pere III, monarch of Castile's rival kingdom of Catalonia-Aragon in 1283.[20] Despite these allusions to feudal commendation, captains with aspirations to act as admirals were equally likely to behave as mercenary free agents. Muntaner's Crònica also describes how the corsair Roger de Flor outfitted a galley with the financial backing of the Genoese Ticino Doria before receiving a baton as an independent captain from Frederic III of Sicily, the second monarch de Flor approached as a potential employer, in 1291.[21] De Flor's later service to the Byzantine Empire would be undertaken on similar terms. Byzantine Emperors and kings of France, Naples, and Sicily would also engage members of the Genoese Doria and Grimaldi clans as 'mercenary' corsairs in this manner during the late thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries.[22]

This amalgam of the feudal and the mercenary continued to inform the bonds between corsairs and their patrons during the early fifteenth century. The fifteenth-century chronicler Gutierre Diaz de Gamez, for example, described the corsarial exploits of Pero Niño, Count of Buelna, on behalf of king Enrique III of Castile as 'feats of chivalry', but indicated that Count of Buelna was fully compensated in advance, 'according to the usage of Castile', for serving the king by hunting enemy corsairs.[23]

The mercenary aspects of an admiral's appointment further complicated the admiral's legal status as he migrated between varying jurisdictions. The possibility was ever-present that a corsair's loyalties—and affiliation—might shift, altering his treatment of other captains—and theirs, of him—as pirates—in war, and in law. The career of Eustace the Monk, a captain active in the Northern Atlantic during the early thirteenth century, illustrates such flexible applications of the term 'pirate' across competing systems of law. Thirteenth-century narrative sources describe Eustace as a former monk, a member of the Boulognais nobility, who turned against his first lord, Count Renaut of Boulogne, when Renaut failed to punish the murderer of Eustace's father. Eustace was drawn then into the service of John I of England, for whom Eustace attacked and occupied the Channel Islands between 1205 and 1215. When Renaut of Boulogne allied with John against his own French lord, Philip Augustus of France, however, Eustace returned to French allegiance. It was in the context of these reversed loyalties that Eustace was executed on 24 August 1217 in the Battle of Sandwich, or Dover, after an English fleet triumphed over a French fleet in the midst of John's wars with Philip Augustus and his son, the future Louis VIII.[24]

Sources for this period represent Eustace the Monk ambiguously. Matthew of Paris terms him pirata nequissimus (most depraved pirate) and piratarum magister (master of pirates) for his acts of maritime depredation, which King John protested he was powerless to control.[25] Accounts of the Battle of Sandwich describe Eustace's execution by decapitation on board his own ship, after Eustace attempted to bargain for his life (see Fig. 1).[26] Yet Eustace's career also inspired the thirteenth-century Old French Li Romans de Witasse le Moine (The Romance of Eustace the Monk), in which the former monk and sea-raider is portrayed as a sympathetic trickster figure.[27]

Still, the label pirate was more than just a negative epithet. Studying such episodes through the lens of legal pluralism enables us to see that naming an enemy corsair a 'pirate' could carry a substantive purpose. When a corsair's services had been enlisted by a political actor (or actors) who sought to wrest sovereignty from those they named as rivals, treating 'corsairs' engaged by rebels as 'pirates' represented an assertion of one law's legitimacy over another. The execution, in 1391, of forty-two zeerovere enlisted by

Fig. 1. Matthew Paris, Manuscript Illustration. Eustace the Monk, Captured and Beheaded by the English, 1217.

Albrecht von Mecklenburg to challenge his political rival Queen Margaret of Denmark as 'pirates' by Margaret's Hanseatic League allies, for example, constituted a rebuke to von Mecklenburg's political aspirations in the Baltic.[28] A few decades earlier, in 1369, officers of the Crown of Catalonia-Aragon had driven home a similar point when they tortured and executed the Provençal corsair Jean de Bourguignon, who had been engaged by rebel nobility specifically to challenge royal authority on the island of Sardinia.[29]

Treaties and their breach

Nothing reveals the workings of legal pluralism in late medieval Europe more clearly than agreements, forged across jurisdictions, that addressed the prerogative of corsairs to search and seize cargo designated as 'enemy', or contraband, even aboard allied, or 'friendly'-ships.[30] Documentary evidence shows that such prerogatives, unencumbered by any elaboration of what would come to be known as 'neutrality', were guaranteed by the texts of peace agreements, treaties or truces. These treaties functioned as the earliest instruments of an 'international' law redacted to mediate across the competing jurisdictions of medieval Europe's peer polities.

The texts of these treaties elaborated new distinctions between legitimate and illegitimate maritime theft. Corsairs who inappropriately interrupted 'friendly' shipping and seized cargo shipped by individuals subject to a polity with whom the corsair's polity maintained a peace agreement were now subject to legitimate censure.[31] Treaty protocols, reinforced by statute, imposed specifications that all departing corsairs tender a security-payment (idoneus, ydoneus, securitas, cautio) to royal or municipal authorities as a guarantee that ships and cargo subject to allied, or 'friendly', polities would be spared seizure.[32] These funds could furnish the means to compensate plaintiffs who might claim that a particular captain attacked their ship in more piratico–'in a piratical manner', that is, with disregard for the presence of a treaty and therefore pre-existing conditions of alliance, or 'friendship'.

Much of the archival documentation for maritime predation in the Middle Ages is preserved in notarial instruments that present these accusations, asserting that the merchant plaintiffs named in them are accordingly owed restitution: the value of whatever cargo might have been seized from their ship or whatever damages were imposed by the attack.[33] Some petitions were resolved in treaties and trade agreements that have been edited and discussed by scholars.[34] Uncompensated plaintiffs might, meanwhile, seek letters of marque or reprisal from their own polities, awarding them rights to recoup their losses through retaliatory piracy.[35] Where the responsibility for a maritime attack lay not with a corsair, but with a 'pirate' who had acted for entirely private ends, plaintiffs might engage in a phenomenon legal anthropologists have termed 'forum shopping': that is, appealing, simultaneously or sequentially, to several systems of justice, in the hope that one might yield acceptable redress.[36] In 1399, for example, a group of Catalan merchants who had been attacked by the Genoese pirate, Sologrus de Nigro, petitioned, variously, the Republic of Genoa; the bailiff of Montpellier (off whose coast they had been attacked); the King of France (overlord to Montpellier and the Genoese Republic); and, finally, the Grand Master of the Knights of Saint John of the Hospital at Rhodes, to whom de Nigro had rumored ties.[37]

Situated between statute and narrative, the instruments in which such damages were sought describe incidents of maritime interruption in minute detail. Such particulars suggest that plaintiffs sought to construct a legal argument for their right to receive restitution, based upon three conditions: the corsair's prior authorization by a sovereign authority; the existence of a truce between that authority and the one to which the plaintiff was subject; and finally, the plaintiff's ability to prove that none of the seized cargo originated from an enemy jurisdiction.[38]

A close analysis of petitions from the archives of Venice, Genoa, and the Crown of Catalonia-Aragon nonetheless suggest that at least some of the merchants who accused corsairs of seizure 'in a piratical manner' were, in fact, conducting trade in violation of restrictions on commerce with the enemy of an ally.[39] Such circumstances, explicitly foreseen in Alfonso X's Siete Partidas, appear to have forfeited merchants access to restitution in the adjudication of cases across European jurisdictions.[40] Corsair patrol thus functioned as a form of surveillance, undertaken to enforce adherence to written agreements between jurisdictions, by extending political sovereignty over the open space of the sea, and the commercial space of the ship, in a manner that paralleled the way in which sovereign polities might lay claim to territory. Both the act of maritime interruption, and the award of restitution, could be accounted incidents through which a merchant's conduct became subject to the scrutiny of a corsair claiming political authority on behalf of a prince or polity.[41]

Litigation over maritime interruption extended the competition between peer polities over control of maritime exchange to the equally fluid and amorphous realm of legal jurisdiction. Here, too, the legal pluralism of medieval Europe, where multiple systems of law flourished alongside one another, complicated the resolution process. Between 1323 and 1333, for example, a suit advanced before Edward II of England (1284–1327), by the curia of Jaime II of Catalonia-Aragon (1264–1327), on behalf of the merchant Berenguer Leçois, became cause for reprisal when English authorities refused to resolve the matter unless Leçois appeared before them to support his accusation that English captains had seized his cargo of Flemish goods aboard two Majorcan ships between Sandwich and Calais.[42]

Conclusion: Traders, Raiders, and Law

Numerous studies have discussed the way in which piracy could become a source of merchant wealth as easily as a disruption. Notarial contracts recorded on behalf of thirteenth- and fourteenth-century Genoese, Venetian, and Catalan captains document merchant investment in expeditions in cursum through fiscal arrangements that duplicated those utilized to capitalize regular commercial ventures, but for their reliance upon loot as a return.[43] The Siete Partidas specified divisions of loot between Crown and private investors in the kingdom of Castile.[44] Narrative sources and works of fiction attest this norm among commercial actors across Christian Europe.[45] Goitein's discussion of Jabbāra, amir of Barqua, moreover suggests that both Eustace the Monk, and the merchant corsairs of the Italian and Iberian peninsulas, had Muslim counterparts, as Jabbāra alternately engaged in commerce; attacked Byzantine and Tunisian ships; and swore allegiance, after 1051, to the Tunisian ruler.[46] Intersections between trade and maritime predation could even widen to encompass entire local economies.[47]

Contemporary Somalia presents similar confluences between trading and raiding, as the rise in piracy has been attributed, in part, to destabilization of the local fishing industry.[48] Taken together with the documented connection between merchants, corsairs, and pirates across the maritime societies of medieval Europe, such evidence supports Horden and Purcell's contention that maritime theft should be imagined as a form of economic 'redistribution', one which may sustain commerce that skates along the edges of moral legitimacy and political sanction.[49]

The dual status of medieval maritime theft as simultaneously legal and illegal certainly created markets, enriched merchants, and enabled emerging polities to vie for economic dominance. Economic competition remains only half the story, however. While Benton, Greene, and others have begun to consider legal pluralism as a factor in shaping the practice of maritime theft in early modern Europe, a review of the sources for medieval piracy suggests that these conditions may be traced to an earlier period.[50] Contention between medieval European legal systems transformed both merchant plaintiffs and the corsairs whose actions they lamented into agents of competition for political as well as economic capital. Corsairs vied for prerogatives of surveillance; plaintiffs for justicia: the settlement or redress of their particular grievance.

This legal competition, reflected in subjective, partisan application of maritime customary codes and statutory law, requires deeper examination. The twenty-first century struggle to assert the UN Convention suggests that it is never easy to identify pirates in the context of multiple jurisdictions and overlapping legal systems; and that attempts to do so may create opportunities for stakeholders invested in naming maritime marauders differently.[51] Perhaps, in seeking to better understand the impediments to the establishment of a common order on the modern seas, political analysts, historians, and students should look, not to the seventeenth century, but to the legal pluralism of medieval Europe.

Short Biography

Emily Sohmer Tai's research focuses upon the interaction between piracy, law, and commerce in the medieval and early modern Mediterranean. Tai's articles, reviews, and book chapters on medieval and early modern piracy have appeared in Medieval Encounters, Mediterranean Historical Review, Itinerario, Medieval Trade, Travel, and Exploration: An Encyclopedia, John B. Friedman and Kristen Figg (eds.), (Garland Press, 2000); and in Seascapes, Littoral Cultures, and Trans-Oceanic Exchanges, Jerry Bentley, Renate Bridenthal, and Karen Wigen (eds.) (Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 2007), also available in an on-line version at http://www.historycooperative.org/proceedings/seascapes/tai.html. She has been the recipient of grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Ford Foundation, the Gladys Krieble Delmas Foundation, and the PSC-CUNY Research Award Program. Tai is an associate professor of History at Queensborough Community College of the City University of New York. She holds a BA in History and Classics from Queens College of the City University of New York, and an AM and PhD in Western European Medieval History from Harvard University.

Notes

* Correspondence: Department of History, Medical Arts 408, Queensborough Community College, City University of New York, 222-05 56th Street, Bayside, New York 11364-1497 or 33–47 14th Street Apt. 5A, Long Island City, NY 11106, USA. Email: etai@qcc.cuny.edu or taiemily@hotmail.com.

[1] For piracy off Somalia, see the Piracy Reporting Center of the International Commercial Crime Services International Maritime Bureau [Online]. Retrieved on 21 November 2011 from: http://www.icc-ccs.org/piracy-reporting-centre/piracynewsafigures. See also D. R. Burgess, Jr., 'Piracy is Terrorism', Op-Ed, New York Times, December 5, 2008. [Online]. Retrieved on 18 July 2009 from: http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/05/opinion/05burgess.html?_r=1 and T. Dagne, 'Somalia: Prospects for a Lasting Peace', Mediterranean Quarterly 20/2 (2009): 95–112. For piracy's 'Golden Age', see M. Reddiker, Villains of All Nations: Atlantic Pirates in the Golden Age (Boston: Beacon Press, 2004).

[2] For Secretary Clinton's remarks of April 15, 2009. [Online]. Retrieved on 21 November 2011 from: http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2009a/04/121758.htm.

[3] United Nations Convention on the High Seas (UNCLOS) article 101, [Online]. Retrieved on 21 November 2011 from: http://www.un.org/depts/los/convention_agreements/texts/unclos/part7.htm.

[4] A. Rubin, The Law of Piracy (New York: Transnational Publishers, 1998), 15–8, especially note 49.

[5] Modern scholarship traces the Latin ammiratus/amiratus to the Arabic emir. See Charles D. Stanton, Norman Naval Operations in the Mediterranean (Woodbridge: The Boydell Press, 2011), esp. 48, 68–69; 217–22; and Janice E. Thomson, Mercenaries, Pirates, and Sovereigns: State-Building and Extra-Territorial Violence in Early Modern Europe (Princeton; Princeton University Press,1994), esp. 22–26; 70–71; 101–52.

[6] F.Braudel, The Mediterranean and the Mediterranean World in the Ages of Philip II, S. Reynolds (Trans.), 2 vols. (London: Harper Colophon Books, 1966), vol. 2, 865–7; M. Fontenay and A. Tenenti, 'Course et piraterie méditerranée de la fin du moyen-âge au début de XIX siècle', in Michel Mollat (ed.), Course et piraterie: études présentées à la Commission internationale d'histoire maritime à l'occasion de son XVe colloque international pendant le XIVe congrès international des sciences historiques (San Francisco, août, 1975), 2 vols. (Paris, 1975), vol. 1, 95–6; I. B. Katele, 'Piracy and the Venetian State: The Dilemma of Maritime Defense in the Fourteenth Century', Speculum, 63/.4 (1988): 865–6; F. L. Cheyette, 'The Sovereign and the Pirates, 1332', Speculum, 40/1 (1970): 40–66; E. S. Tai, 'Restitution and the Definition of a Pirate', Mediterranean Historical Review, 19/2 (2004):34–70, esp. 35–36; 'Honor Among Thieves: Piracy, Restitution, and Reprisal in Genoa, Venice, and the Crown of Catalonia-Aragon, 1339–1417', Ph.D. diss. (Harvard University, 1996), 3–6; and 'Marking Water: Piracy and Property in the Premodern West', in J. M. Bentley, R. Bridenthal, K. Wigen (eds.), Seascapes: Maritime Histories, Littoral Cultures, and Transoceanic Exchanges, (Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 2007), 205–20.[Online]. Retrieved on November 26, 2011 from: http://www.historycooperative.org/proceedings/seascapes/tai.html.

[7] See Thomson and Rubin (although note 43–8); R. C. Ritchie, Captain Kidd and the War Against the Pirates, (Cambridge, Mass: Harvard University Press, 1986); A. Perotin-Dumon, 'The Pirate and the Emperor: Power and the Law of the Sea, 1450–1850', in J. Tracy (ed.), The Political Economy of Merchant Empires, (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1991), 196–227; J. L. Anderson, 'Piracy and World History: An Economic Perspective on Maritime Predation', Journal of World History, 6/1 (1995): 175–99; B. Fuchs, 'Faithless Empires: Pirates, Renegadoes, and the English Nation', ELH, 67/1 (2000): 45–69; and A. T. Mahan, The Influence of Sea Power Upon History, 1660–1783 (Boston: Little, Brown, and Company, 1890), esp. 1–33. [Online]. Retrieved on 13 July 2009 from: http://www.gutenberg.org/etext/13529.

[8] Sally Engle Merry, 'Legal Pluralism', Law and Society Review, 22/5 (1988): 869–96; Lauren Benton, Law and Colonial Cultures: Legal Regimes in World History, 1400–1900 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2002), esp. 7–12; and B. Z. Tamanaha, 'A Non-Essentialist Version of Legal Pluralism', Journal of Law and Society 27/2 (2000): 296–321.

[9] Note Harold J. Berman, Law and Revolution: The Formation of Western Legal Tradition (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1983), esp. 255–69 and Manlio Bellomo, The Common Legal Past of Europe, L.G. Cochrane (Trans.) (Washington, D.C.: The Catholic University of America Press, 1995).

[10] Note P. Górecki, 'A Historian as a Source of Law: Abbot Peter of Henryków and the Invocation of Norms in Medieval Poland, C. 1200–1270', Law and History Review, 18/3 (2000): 470–523, esp. 483; and Benton, 34–45.

[11] Note W. Ashburner (ed.), The Rhodian Sea-Law, (Oxford, 1909, reprinted 1976), esp. cxliii–cxl; III.4; 9–10; 15; 28–9, 95–6; 207; [Online]. Retrieved on 20 June 2012 from: http://archive.org/details/nomosrhodinnauti00rhoduoft. Justinian's Digest 14.2.2; 14.2.3; and Digest 49, available in The Civil Law, Trans. S. P. Scott (Cincinnati: The Central Trust Company, 1932), and [Online]. Retrieved on 21 June 2012 from: http://www.constitution.org/sps/sps04.htm, See also Rubin, 17; and Tai, 'Marking Water', 215 [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.historycooperative.org/proceedings/seascapes/tai.html.

[12] J.M. Pardessus (ed.), Collection des lois maritimes antérieures au XVIIIe siècle, 6 vols. (Paris, 1839, reedition Turin, 1960), vol. 5, 20; V. Promis (ed.), 'Statuti della colonia genovese di Pera', Miscellanea di storia italiana edita per curia della regia deputazione di storia patria per le antiche provincie e la Lombardia, XI (1871): 513–780, esp. 703–706, c.164–7; 735–736 c.206–207; C. Desimoni, A. T. Belgrano, and V. Poggi (eds.), Leges genuenses, in Historiae patriae monumenta, vol. 18 (Turin, 1901), cols. 519–520; 731–732; 943–944; F. Bonaini (ed.), Statuti inediti della città di Pisa dal XII al XIV secolo, ed. 3 vols. (Florence, 1854–1870), esp. vol. 1, 227, c. 119; vol. 2, 923–927, c. 30–31; vol. 3, 364–365, c. 23–26; 425, c. 115; 534–536, c. 97; 578–579, c.143; and A. de Capmany y de Montpalau (ed.), Ordenanzas de las armadas navales de la Corona de Aragón aprobadas por el rey D. Pedro IV (1354), (Madrid, 1787), [Online]. Retrieved on 20 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=6W5NDNlq1twC&pg=RA1-PA1&lpg=RA1-PA1&dq=Ordenanzas+de+las+armadas+navales+de+la+Corona+de+Arag%C3%B3n&source=bl&ots=dSA1aPYrr_&sig=7U0y7UA-cTzMpvt7j06pBpCOfCE&hl=en&ei=L8AVTKSZNoT48AaC2-2vCg&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=1&ved=0CBUQ6AEwAA#v=onepage&q&f=false See also L. V. Mott, Sea Power in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Catalan-Aragonese Fleet in the War of the Sicilian Vespers. (Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 2003), 67–8.

[13] Note G. Lopez (ed.), Las Siete partidas del Rey Don Alfonso el Sabio Cotejadas con Varios Codices Antiguos por La Real Academia de la Historia, y Glosadas, 5 vols. (Paris: Lasserre Editor, 1847) Book II, Title XXIV, 1; vol. 2, 282–5; translated by S. P. Scott in Las Siete Partidas, 5 vols., R. I. Burns, S. J (ed.), (Philadelphia: University of Philadelphia, 2001), vol. 2, 463–4; and Edward III of England's appointment of an admiral in T. Rymer (ed.), Foedora, Conventiones, Literae et cuiuscumque generis Acta Publica inter Reges Angliae et alios quosvis imperatores, reges, pontigices, principles vel communitates, A.B. 1100–1708, 20 vols. (London, 1708), vol. 7, 127–8 (24 November 1376).

[14] See Giorgio and Giovanni Stella, Annales genuenses, G. Petti Balbi (ed.), Rerum italicarum scriptores, ser. 2, Raccolta degli storici italiani, 18.2, (Bologna, 1975), 146 (1346); 225 (1398); 236 (1399); 274 (1404); 281 (1407); 284 (1408); A. Giustiniani, Annali della Repubblica di Genova, 2 vols. (Genoa, 1854), vol. 2, 85, 195; 209; 235; 239; 245; Marino Sanuto, I Diarii di Marino Sanudo, N. Barozzi, R. Fulin, F. Stefani, et al. (eds.) 58 vols. (Venice, 1879–1903), vol. 3, 205–206; [Online]. Retrieved on 20 December 2011 from: http://www.archive.org/stream/idiariidimarino43sanugoog/idiariidimarino43sanugoog_djvu.txt; Girolamo Priuli, I diarii in Rerum Italicarum Scriptores, Arturo Segrè and Roberto Cessi (eds.), (Città di Castello and Bologna, 1912–1938), vol. 2, 191; F. C. Lane, 'Naval Actions and Fleet Organization, 1499–1502', in Renaissance Venice, J.R. Hale (ed.), (Totowa, New Jersey: Rowman and Littlefield, 1973), 165; and Tai, Honor Among Thieves, 201–2; 594–9.

[15] Jutgamen de la Mar or Les Costumes de Oléron, in Pardessus, esp. article 45, vol. 1, 350–1. '…ladicte nef ne exerçoit le mestier de pillerie, et que les gens d'icelle ne pussent poinct pyrates, ou escumeurs de mer, ou bien enemies de nostre saincte foy catholicque, car alors s'ilz sont pyrates, pilleurs, ou escumeurs de mer, ou Turcs, et autre contraires et ennemys de nostre dicte saincte foy catholicque…' and translations in T. Twiss (ed.), Monumenta Juridica: The Black Book of the Admiralty, 5 vols., Rerum Britannicarum Medii Aevi Scriptores, n. 55 (London, 1874; reprinted Kraus Reprints, Ltd., 1975), vol. 2, 478–81 [Online]. Retrieved on 4 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=-CQJAAAAIAAJ&pg=PA210&lpg=PA210&dq=Jutgamen+de+la+Mar+or+Les+Costumes+de+Ol%C3%A9ron&source=bl&ots=UTY06_U0Ct&sig=RsW78Rkc7mzkoXrHrC8MSwb-OfA&hl=en&ei=wjvcTp6SEeTn0QHw95TyDQ&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=1&ved=0CCgQ6AEwAA#v=twopage&q&f=true and G. Miege (Trans.), The Ancient Sea-Laws of Oléron, Visby, and the Hanse-Towns, Still in Force, (London: J. Redmayne, 1686) 13, no. 45, [Online]. Retrieved on 27 November 2011 from: http://www.furthark.com/hanseaticleague/src_pri_sealaws.shtml.

[16] Llibre del Consolat de Mar, in Pardessus, vol. 2, esp. 121–2 (cap. LXXVIII); 206 (cap. CLXXXIII); 208–9 (cap. CLXXXV); 210–2 (cap. CLXXXVI); 212–22 (cap. CLXXXVII); 303–7; 338–47 (cap. CCXLV); translated in S. S. Jados, Consulate of the Sea and Related Documents (Tuscaloosa: University of Alabama Press, 1975), esp. 68–9; 128–30, or nos. 61, 81, 230–32, and 298–334 [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://libro.uca.edu/consulate/part2a.htm, http://libro.uca.edu/consulate/part2e.htm, and http://libro.uca.edu/consulate/part3.htm.

[17] 'Recès de la Ligue Anséatique', Pardessus, vol. 2, 464, no. 6.

[18] Rymer (ed.), Foedora, vol. 4, 71 (16 July 1324); 73 (22 July 1324).

[19] Lopez (ed.), Siete Partidas, Book II, Title XXIV, 3; vol. 2, 283.

[20] Compare Lopez (ed.), Siete Partidas, Book II, XXIV, iii, vol. 2, 283–4; Scott (Trans.), vol. 2, 463–4; and Ramon Muntaner, Crònica, V. J. Escartí (ed.), (Valencia: Institució Alfonso el Maganànim, 1999) LXXVI, vol. 1, 164–9, esp. 165; translated by H. M. Goodenough (Trans.), The Chronicle of Ramon Muntaner, The Hakluyt Society, second series, no. 47, 50, (London, 1920–1921). vol. 1, 171. [Online]. Retrieved on 27 November 2011 from: http://www.yorku.ca/inpar/muntaner_goodenough.pdf.

[21] Muntaner, Crònica, CXCIV, Escarti (ed.), vol. 2, 411–6, esp. 413; Goodenough (Trans.), vol. 2, 469–70.

[22] N. Bettembourg, 'Course et piraterie génoise en Mediterranée orientale (1204–1417)', Thèse du doctorat, (Marc Bloch University, June, 2008), 61–79. I am grateful to Dr. Bettembourg for providing an electronic version of his thesis. See also S. Rose, The Medieval Sea (London: Hambledon Continuum, 2007) 114; K. L. Reyerson, 'Montpellier and Genoa: the Dilemma of Dominance', Journal of Medieval History, 20 (1994): 370–2; and Tai, Honor Among Thieves, 53–4; 106.

[23] Gutierre Díaz de Gamez, El Victorial, crónica de don Pero Niño, conde de Buelna, J. de Mata Carriazo (ed.), (Madrid, 1940). See also The Unconquered Knight: A Chronicle of the Deeds of Don Pero Niño, Count of Buelna by his standard-bearer Guitierre Diaz de Gamez (1431–1444), J. Evans (Trans.) (Cambridge, ON, 2000), 21; [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.yorku.ca/inpar/gamez_evans.pdf. See also M. T. Ferrer I Mallol in Corsarios Castellanos y Vascos en el Mediterráneo medieval (Barcelona, 2000), 9–98; and Rose, 144–9.

[24] G. S. Burgess (Trans.), Two Medieval Outlaws: Eustace the Monk and Fouke-Fitz Waryn, (Cambridge: D.S. Brewer, 1997), vii-40; M. Keen, The Outlaws of Medieval Legend (London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1961), 53–63; H. L. Cannon, 'The Battle of Sandwich and Eustace the Monk', The English Historical Review, 27/108 (1912): 649–70. and Rose, Medieval Sea, 113.

[25] Matthaei Parisiensis Monachi Sancti Albani, Historia Anglorum, F. Madden (ed.), 3 vols., Rerum Britannicarum Medii Aevi Scriptores, vol. 44 (London: Longmans, Green, Reader and Dyer, 1866), vol. 2, 219–20.

[26] Ibid, vol. 3, 240–1.

[27] Li Romans de Witasse le Moine: Roman du treizième siècle, ed. D. J. Conlon (Chapel Hill, 1972), translator Leah Shopkow, [Online]. Retrieved on 22 June 2012 from: http://www.courseportfolio.org/peer/potfolioFiles/anonF/shopkow-l-2003-1/eustace.htm also translated in Two Medieval Outlaws, 50–78.

[28] P. Dollinger, La Hanse (XIIe-XVIIe siècles) (Paris: Aubier, 1964), 104–6; and D. Meier, Seafarers, Merchants, and Pirates in the Middle Ages, Trans. Angus McGeoch (Woodbridge: The Boydell Press, 2006), 146–59.

[29] For Jean Bourguignon see Tai, 'Marking Water,' esp. 213; and [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.historycooperative.org/proceedings/seascapes/tai.html.

[30] Llibre del Consolat de Mar chapter 231, Pardessus, vol. 2, 303–307. See also Jados, 191–192, at [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://libro.uca.edu/consulate/consulate.htm, Twiss, vol. 3, 538–47; M. H. Keen, The Laws of War in the Middle Ages (London: Routledge and Kegal Paul, 1965), 65, 141–3; 208–12; C. J. Kulsrud, Maritime Neutrality to 1780 (Boston: Little, Brown, and Company, 1936), [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=OD5VCltR-lUC&pg=PP8&lpg=PP8&dq=kulsrud+maritime+neutrality&source=bl&ots=sr46GsTkDA&sig=rL_KkmbM-CDjpxcQ549EnYNgVok&hl=en&sa=X&ei=nwT0TsrYCeXu0gH7h7ySAg&ved=0CCUQ6AEwAQ#v=onepage&q=kulsrud%20maritime%20neutrality&f=false, and E. Nys, La guerre maritime: Étude du droit internationale (Brussels: C. Muquardt, 1881), 36, 40–1.

[31] See P. Chaplais (ed.), English Medieval Diplomatic Practice Part I: Documents and Interpretation, 2 vols. (London, 1982), esp. vol.2, 467–663; J. Dumont, Corps universel diplomatique du droit des gens contenant un recueil des traitez d'alliance de paix, de trêve (Amsterdam, 1726), [Online]. Retrieved on 18 June 2010 from: http://www.archive.org/stream/corpsuniverseldi06dumo#page/n5/mode/2up>, K.H. Ziegler,'The Influences of Medieval Roman Law on Peace Treaties', in Peace Treaties and International Law in European History: From the Late Middle Ages to World War I, R. Lesaffer (ed.) (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2004), 147–61; T. Meron, 'The Authority to Make Treaties in the Middle Ages', The American Journal of International Law, 89/1 (1995): 1–20; and C.J. Ford, 'Piracy or Policy: The Crisis in the Channel, 1400–3', Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, Fifth Series, 29 (179): 81–9.

[32] Promis, 'Statuti', 704, c. 164; Pardessus, vol. 5, 258, 349; and Bettembourg, 47–50.

[33] Tai, 'Restitution and the Definition of a Pirate', 38–60; and eadem, Honor Among Thieves, 33–36; 93–100; 621–2, n. 72.

[34] Tai, Honor Among Thieves, 281–309; 320–49; and 600–14.

[35] M.C. Chavarot, 'La practique des lettres de marque d'après les arrêts du parlements (XIIIe début XVe siècle)', Bibliothèque de l'Écoles des Chartes, 14/1 (1991): 51–89; A. Aromando, 'Le rappresaglie a Genova viste e illustrate attraverso una controversia della fine del Trecento', Memoria della Accademia Lunigianese di scienze 'Giovanni Capellini', 42 (1972): 17–79; A. Rovere, 'Un procedimento di rappresaglia contro Rodi (1388-1390)', Atii della Società Ligure Patria Storia, n.s. 23.2 (97) (Genoa, 1983): 67–88, and J. Mutges i Vives, 'La marca de Bernat Melhac, La Corona Catalano-Aragonesa i el Llenguadoc (1327–1336)', Anuario de estudios medievales, 16 (1986): 227–38; Keen, The Laws of War, 54–67; 218–38; Cheyette, 54–67, and Tai, 'Restitution and the Definition of a Pirate', esp. 35, 56–57.

[36] The International Council on Human Rights Policy, When Legal Worlds Overlap: Human Rights, State and Non-State Law (Versoix: International Council on Human Rights Policy, 2009) [Online]. Retrieved on 5 December 2011 from: http://www.ichrp.org/files/reports/50/135_report_en.pdf.

[37] Tai, 'Restitution and the Definition of a Pirate', 49–50.

[38] E. Lewis, 'Responsibility for Piracy in the Middle Ages', Journal of Comparative Legislation and International Law, Third Series, 19/1 (1937): 77–89; and Tai, 'Restitution and the Definition of a Pirate', esp. 38–9.

[39] For examples, see Tai, Honor Among Thieves, 286–8; 355–8; 412; 561–2; eadem, 'Piracy and Law in Medieval Genoa: the Consilia of Bartolomeo Bosco*, Medieval Encounters*, 9/2–3 (2003), esp. 265-266; and eadem, 'Marking Water', 211–2.

[40] Note Lopez (ed.), Siete Partidas, V, title IX, xiii, vol. 3, 425–8, Scott (Trans.), vol. 4, 1082.

[41] Note Tai, 'Marking Water,' esp. 212–4; and [Online]. Retrieved from: http://www.historycooperative.org/proceedings/seascapes/tai.html.

[42] Rymer (ed.), Foedora, vol. 4, 15 (13 August 1323); 83–4 (September 18, 1324); 577 (5 October 1333).

[43] Note R. S. Lopez, 'Dieci documenti sulla guerra di corsa', Su e giù per la storia di Genova, Collana storica di fonti e studi, 20 (Genoa, 1975), 313–27; idem, with I.W. Raymond, in Medieval Trade in the Mediterranean World, (New York: Columbia University Press, 1955, reprinted 1990), esp. 168–73 and 221–3; [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=I6iDJBVXSL0C&dq=Lopez+and+Raymond+medieval+trade&printsec=frontcover&source=bl&ots=KFUS9sCJVi&sig=gEXtgtTPyix0yBjNsizMQDFVS_w&hl=en&ei=w8lnSq2iJJOCtgf297CQCw&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=2;, A. de Capmany y de Montpalau, Memorias históricas sobre la marina, commercio y artes de la antigua ciudad de Barcelona, 3 vols., E. Giralt y Raventos and C. Batlle y Gallart (eds.) (Barcelona, 1961), vol. 2, 188–98, docs. 127, 128, and 130; [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.archive.org/stream/memoriashistri02capm#page/188/mode/2up, L. Balletto, Mercanti, pirati, e corsari nei mari della Corsica (Genoa, 1978); eadem, Genova nel Duecento: Uomini nel porto e uomini sul mare, Collana storica di fonti e studi, 36 (Genoa, 1983), 10–79; M. T. Ferrer I Mallol, 'La conquesta de Sardenya i la guerra de cors mediterrani,' in Els catalans a Sardenya, J. Corbonell and F. Manconi (eds.) (Barcelona, 1984), 35–40; Anna Unali, Marinai, pirati, e corsari, Studi e testi di storia medieovale, 6 (Bologna, 1983); Mott, 126, and Tai, Honor Among Thieves, 46–50; 320–49.

[44] Lopez (ed.), Siete Partidas II, XXVI, esp. iii-xxx, vol. 2, 293–322; Scott (Trans.), vol. 2, 474–95.

[45] Note Annali genovesi, vol. 2, 83; vol. 5, 46; and Giovanni Boccaccio, Decamerone, 2 vols. (Milan, 1968), esp. II, iv; available with translation at: [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.brown.edu/Departments/Italian_Studies/dweb/texts/DecShowText.php?myID=nov0204&expand=empty&lang=eng. See also Tai, Honor Among Thieves, 6–7.

[46] S. D. Goitein, A Mediterranean Society: The Jewish Communities of the Arab World as Portrayed in the Cairo Geniza, Volume I: Economic Foundations (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1967), 327–9.

[47] Note examples in Evans, 28; and Rose, 144–5.

[48] Elliot A. Anderson, ''It's a Pirate's Life for Some: The Development of an Illegal Industry in Response to an Unjust Global Power Dynamic,'' Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies 17, no. 2 (2010): 319–39; and Jeffrey Gettleman, 'A Fluke of the Wind', The New York Times Magazine, October 9, 2011, [Online]. Retrieved on 5 December 2011 from: http://www.nytimes.com/2011/10/09/magazine/taken-by-pirates.html?pagewanted=all.

[49] P. Horden and N. Purcell, The Corrupting Sea: A Study of Mediterranean History (London: Blackwell Publishers, 2000), esp. 156–8; 387–91.

[50] Lauren Benton, A Search for Sovereignty: Law and Geography in European Empires, 1400–1900 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010); and Molly Greene, Catholic Pirates and Greek Merchants: A Maritime History of the Mediterranean (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2010).

[51] Jillaine Seymour, 'The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea: A Great Mistake?'Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies 13/1 (2006): 1–35.

Bibliography

Adorno, J. Itinéraire d'Anselme Adorno au Terre Sainte: 1470–1471, J. Heers and G. de Groër (Trans. and eds.), (Paris: Éditions du Centre national de la recherche scientifique, 1978).

Ahrweiler, H., Byzance et la mer. La marine de guerre, la politique et les institutions maritimes de Byzance aux VIIe-XVe siècles (Paris: Presses universitaires de France, 1966).

Anderson, E. A., 'It's a Pirate's Life for Some: The Development of an Illegal Industry in Response to an Unjust Global Power Dynamic', Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies, 17/2 (2010): 319–39.

Anderson, J. L., 'Piracy and World History: An Economic Perspective on Maritime Predation', Journal of World History, 6/1 (1995): 175–99.

Aromando, A., 'Le rappresaglie a Genova viste e Illustrate Attraverso una Controversia della fine del Trecento', Memoria della Accademia Lunigianese di Scienze 'Giovanni Capellini', 42 (1972): 17–79.

Ashburner, W. (ed.), Nomos Rhodon nautikos, The Rhodian Sea-Law (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1909, reprinted 1976).

Balletto, L., 'Corsari, Pirati, Uomini d'arme a Portovenere, sec. XIII', Rassegna Storica della Liguria, 2 (1975): 51–71.

Balletto, L., Genova nel Duecento: Uomini nel porto e uomini sul mare, Collana storica di fonti e studi, 36 (Genoa: Università di Genova, Istituto di medievistica, 1983).

Balletto, L., Mercanti, pirati, e corsari nei mari della Corsica (Genoa: Università di Genova, Istituto di paleografia e storia medievale, 1978).

Bartolus, de Sassoferrato, Lucernae iuris, omnia quae extant, opera, 11 vols. (Venice, 1590–1602).

Belgrano, L. T., and di Saint-Angelo, C. I. (eds.), Annali genovesi di Caffaro e de suoi continuatori, 5 vols. (Rome: Istituto storico italiano, 1890–1939).

Bellomo, M., The Common Legal Past of Europe, L. G. Cochrane (Trans.), (Washington, D.C.: The Catholic University of America Press, 1995).

Benton, L., Law and Colonial Cultures: Legal Regimes in World History, 1400–1900 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2002).

Benton, L., A Search for Sovereignty: Law and Geography in European Empires, 1400–1900 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010).

Berman, H. J., Law and Revolution: The Formation of Western Legal Tradition (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1983).
Bettembourg, N., 'Course et piraterie génoise en Mediterranée orientale (1204–1417)', Thèse du doctorat, (Marc Bloch University, June, 2008).
Boccaccio, Giovanni., Decamerone, 2 vols. (Milan: Fratelli Fabbri Editori, 1968). [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.brown.edu/Departments/Italian_Studies/dweb/texts/DecShowText.php?myID=nov0204&expand=empty&lang=eng.
Bonaini, F. (ed.), Statuti inediti della città di Pisa dal XII al XIV secolo, 3 vols. (Florence: G. P. Vieusseux, 1854–1870).
Braudel, F., The Mediterranean and the Mediterranean World in the Ages of Philip II, S. Reynolds (Trans.), 2 vols. (London: Harper Colophon Books, 1966).
Burgess, D. R. Jr., 'Piracy is Terrorism', Op-Ed, New York Times, December 5, 2008 [Online]. Retrieved on 18 July 2009 from: http://www.nytimes.com/2008/12/05/opinion/05burgess.html?_r=1.
Burgess, G. S. (Trans.), Two Medieval Outlaws: Eustace the Monk and Fouke-Fitz Waryn (Cambridge: D.S. Brewer, 1997).
Cannon, H. L., 'The Battle of Sandwich and Eustace the Monk', The English Historical Review, 27/108 (1912): 649–70.
Capmany y de Montpalau, A de (ed.), Ordenanzas de las armadas navales de la Corona de Aragón aprobadas por el rey D. Pedro IV (1354) (Madrid, 1787). [Online]. Retrieved on 20 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=6W5NDNlq1twC&pg=RA1-PA1&lpg=RA1-PA1&dq=Ordenanzas+de+las+armadas+navales+de+la+Corona+de+Arag%C3%B3n&source=bl&ots=dSA1aPYrr_&sig=7U0y7UA-cTzMpvt7j06pBpCOfCE&hl=en&ei=L8AVTKSZNoT48AaC2-2vCg&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=1&ved=0CBUQ6AEwAA#v=onepage&q&f=false.
Capmany y de Montpalau, A de., Memorias históricas sobre la marina, commercio y artes de la antigua ciudad de Barcelona, E. Giralt y Raventos and C. Batlle y Gallart (eds.), 3 vols. (Barcelona: Càmara Oficial de Comercio y Navegación de Barcelona, 1961). [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.archive.org/details/memoriashistri01capm.
Chaplais, P. (ed.), English Medieval Diplomatic Practice Part I: Documents and Interpretation, 2 vols. (London: Her Majesty's Stationery Office, 1982).
Chavarot, M. C., 'La practique des lettres de marque d'après les arrêts du parlements (XIIIe début XVe siècle)', Bibliothèque de l'Écoles des Chartes, 14/1 (1991): 51–89.
Cheyette, F. L., 'The Sovereign and the Pirates, 1332', Speculum, 40/1 (1970): 40–66.
Desimoni, C., Belgrano, A. T., and Poggi, V. (eds.), Leges genuenses, in Historiae patriae monumenta, vol. 18 (Turin: Fratres Bocca, 1901).
Dillon, D., 'Maritime Piracy: Defining the Problem', SAIS Review, 25/1 (2005): 155–65.
Dollinger, P., La Hanse (XIIe-XVIIe siècles) (Paris: Aubier, 1964).
Dubner, B. H., The Law of International Sea-Piracy (The Hague: N. Nijhoff Publishers, 1980).
Dumont, J., Corps universel diplomatique du droit des gens contenant un recueil des traitez d'alliance de paix, de trêve (Amsterdam, 1726). [Online]. Retrieved on 18 June 2010 from: http://www.archive.org/stream/corpsuniverseldi06dumo#page/n5/mode/2up.
Evans, J. (Trans.), The Unconquered Knight: A Chronicle of the Deeds of Don Pero Niño, Count of Buelna by his standard-bearer Guitierre Diaz de Gamez (1431–1444) (Cambridge, ON: In Parenthesis Publications, Medieval Castilian Series, 2000). [Online]. Retrieved on 8 July 2009 from: http://www.yorku.ca/inpar/gamez_evans.pdf.
Favreau-Lilie, M. L., 'Die italienische Levante-Piraterie und die Sicherheit der Seewege nach Syrien im 12. und 13. Jahrhundert', Vierteljahrschrift für Sozial-und Wirtschaftsgeschichte, 65 (1978): 461–510.
Ferrer I Mallol, M. T., Corsarios Castellanos y Vascos en el Mediterráneo medieval (Barcelona: Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas Institución Milá y Fontanals, Departamento de Estudios Medievales, 2000).
Ferrer I Mallol, M. T., 'La conquesta de Sardenya i la guerra de cors mediterrani', in J. Corbonell and F. Manconi (eds.), Els catalans a Sardenya (Barcelona: Enciclopèdia Catalana, 1984), 35–40.
Ford, C. J., 'Piracy or Policy: The Crisis in the Channel, 1400–1403', Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, Fifth Series, 29 (1979): 63–78.
Forte, A. D. M., ' ''Kenning be Kenning and Course be Course'': Maritime Jurimetrics in Scotland and Northern Europe 1400–1600', Edinburgh Law Review, 2 (1998): 56–89. [Online]. Retrieved on 20 December 2011 from: http://aura.abdn.ac.uk/bitstream/2164/30/1/050421-001.pdf.
Frankot, B. I., 'Medieval Maritime Law and Its Practice in the Towns of Northern Europe: A Comparison by the example of Shipwreck, Jettison and Ship Collision', Ph.D. diss., (University of Aberdeen, 2004). [Online]. Retrieved on 5 December 2011 from: http://lib.haifa.ac.il/electronictexts/001453536.pdf.
Fuchs, B., 'Faithless Empires: Pirates, Renegadoes, and the English Nation', ELH, 67/1 (2000): 45–69.
Gerwitz, P., 'Narrative and Rhetoric in the Law', in P. Brooks and P. Gerwitz (eds.), Law's Stories: Narrative and Rhetoric in the Law (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1996), 2–13.
Gettleman, J., 'A Fluke of the Wind', The New York Times Magazine, October 9, 2011 [Online]. Retrieved on 5 December 2011 from: http://www.nytimes.com/2011/10/09/magazine/taken-by-pirates.html?pagewanted=all.
Giustiniani, A., Annali della Repubblica di Genova, 2 vols. (Genoa, 1854).

Goodenough, H. M. (Trans.), The Chronicle of Ramon Muntaner, The Hakluyt Society, second series, no. 47, 50, (London: Hakluyt Society, 1920–1921). [Online]. Retrieved on 8 July 2009 from: http://www.yorku.ca/inpar/muntaner_goodenough.pdf.

Górecki, P., 'A Historian as a Source of Law: Abbot Peter of Henryków and the Invocation of Norms in Medieval Poland, C. 1200–1270', Law and History Review, 18/3 (2000): 479–523.

Goitein, S. D., A Mediterranean Society: The Jewish Communities of the Arab World as Portrayed in the Cairo Geniza, Volume I: Economic Foundations (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1967).

Green, J., 'The Development of Maritime Law in Medieval Spain: The Case of Castile and the Siete Partidas', The Historian, 58/3 (1996): 575–88.

Green, W. C. (Trans.), Egil's Saga Skallagrimssonar (London, 1893). [Online]. Retrieved on 13 June 2010 from: http://www.sagadb.org/egils_saga.en and http://www.sacred-texts.com/neu/egil/index.htm.

Greene, M., Catholic Pirates and Greek Merchants: A Maritime History of the Mediterranean (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2010).

de Gamez, Gutierre Díaz, El victorial, crónica de don Pero Niño, conde de Buelna, J. de Mata Carriazo (ed.), (Madrid: Espasa Calpe, 1940).

Horden, P., and Purcell, N., The Corrupting Sea: A Study of Mediterranean History (London: Blackwell Publishers, 2000).

Khaldun, Ibn, The Muqaddimah: An Introduction to History, F. Rosenthal (Trans.), 3 vols. (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1967). [Online]. Retrieved on 15 June 2010 from: http://www.muslimphilosophy.com/ik/Muqaddimah/.

International Chamber of Commerce, 'International Maritime Bureau Piracy Reporting Centre'. [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://www.icc-ccs.org/.

International Council on Human Rights Policy, When Legal Worlds Overlap: Human Rights, State and Non-State Law (Versoix: International Council on Human Rights Policy, 2009). [Online]. Retrieved on 5 December 2011 from: http://www.ichrp.org/files/reports/50/135_report_en.pdf.

Jados, S. S., Consulate of the Sea and Related Documents (Tuscaloosa: University of Alabama Press, 1975). [Online]. Retrieved on 13 July 2009 from: http://libro.uca.edu/consulate/consulate.htm.

Johnson, C., A General History of the Robberies and Murders of the Most Notorious Pirates (New York: The Lyons Press, 1998). [Online]. Retrieved on 21 November 2011 from: http://ebooks.adelaide.edu.au/d/defoe/daniel/pyrates1/index.html.

Katele, I. B., 'Captains and Corsairs: Venice and Piracy, 1261–1381', Ph.D., diss. (University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 1986).

Katele, I. B., 'Piracy and the Venetian State: The Dilemma of Maritime Defense in the Fourteenth Century', Speculum, 63/4 (1988): 865–89.

Keen, M. H., The Laws of War in the Middle Ages (London: Routledge and Kegal Paul, 1965).

Keen, M. H., The Outlaws of Medieval Legend (London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1961).

Khalilieh, H. S., Admiralty and Maritime Law in the Mediterranean Sea (ca. 800–1050): The Kitāb Akriyat al-Sufun vis-à-vis the Nomos Rhodion Nautikos (Leiden: Brill Publishers, 2006).

Kuehn, T., 'The Renaissance Consilium as Justice', Renaissance Quarterly, 59/4 (2006): 1058–88.

Kulsrud, C. J., Maritime Neutrality to 1780 (Boston: Little, Brown, and Company, 1936). [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=OD5VCltR-lUC&pg=PP8&lpg=PP8&dq=kulsrud+maritime+neutrality&source=bl&ots=sr46GsTkDA&sig=rL_KkmbM-CDjpxcQ549EnYNgVok&hl=en&sa=X&ei=nwT0TsrYCeXu0gH7h7ySAg&ved=0CCUQ6AEwAQ#v=onepage&q=kulsrud%20maritime%20neutrality&f=false.

Lane, F. C., 'Naval Actions and Fleet Organization, 1499–1502', in J. R. Hale (ed.), Renaissance Venice (Totowa, New Jersey: Rowman and Littlefield, 1973), 146–73.

Levine, R., 'Baptizing Pirates: Argumentum Fabula in Norman Historia', Mediaevistik, 4 (1991): 157–78.

Lewis, E., 'Responsibility for Piracy in the Middle Ages', Journal of Comparative Legislation and International Law, Third Series, 19/1 (1937): 77–89.

Lopez, G. (ed.), Las Siete partidas del Rey Don Alfonso el Sabio Cotejadas con Varios Codices Antiguos por La Real Academia de la Historia, y Glosadas, 5 vols. (Paris: Lasserre Editor, 1847).

Lopez, R. S., 'Dieci documenti sulla guerra di corsa', in Roberto S. Lopez (ed.), Su e giù per la storia di Genova, Collana storica di fonti e studi, 20 (Genoa: Università di Genova, Istituto di Paleografia e Storia Medievale, 1975), 313–27.

Lopez, R. S., and Raymond, I. W., Medieval Trade in the Mediterranean World (New York: Columbia University Press, 1955, reprinted 1990). [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=I6iDJBVXSL0C&dq=Lopez+and+Raymond+medieval+trade&printsec=frontcover&source=bl&ots=KFUS9sCJVi&sig=gEXtgtTPyix0yBjNsizMQDFVS_w&hl=en&ei=w8lnSq2iJJOCtgf297CQCw&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=2.

López Lázaro, F., 'Pirates of the Caribbean: Early Modern Spain and Latin America as Part of the Atlantic World', Bulletin of the Society for Spanish and Portuguese Historical Studies, 33/1 (2008): 1–13.

Lucas, H. S., 'John Crabbe: Flemish Pirate, Merchant, and Adventurer', Speculum, 20/3 (1943): 334–50.
McCormick, M., Origins of the European Economy: Communications and Commerce, A.D. 300–900 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003).
Mahan, A. T., The Influence of Sea Power Upon History, 1660–1783 (Boston: Little, Brown, and Company, 1890). [Online]. Retrieved on 13 July 2009 from: http://www.gutenberg.org/etext/13529.
Marsden, R. G. (ed.), Documents Relating to the Law and Custom of the Sea, 2 vols. (London: Navy Records Society, 1915–1916), 49–50. [Online]. Retrieved on 15 June 2010 from: http://www.archive.org/details/documentsrelatin01marsuoft.
Matthaei Parisiensis Monachi Sancti Albani, Historia Anglorum, F. Madden (ed.), 3 vols., Rerum Britannicarum Medii Aevi Scriptores, vol. 44 (London: Longmans, Green, Reader and Dyer, 1866).
Meier, D., Seafarers, Merchants, and Pirates in the Middle Ages, Angus McGeoch (Trans.), (Woodbridge: The Boydell Press, 2006).
Ménager, L. R., Admiratus-' Amēras: l'émirat et les origines de l'amirauté (XI-XIIIe siècles) (Paris: S. E. V. P. E. N, 1960).
Meron, T., 'The Authority to Make Treaties in the Middle Ages', The American Journal of International Law, 89/1 (1995): 1–20.
Miege, G. (Trans.), The Ancient Sea-Laws of Oléron, Visby, and the Hanse-Towns, Still in Force (London: J. Redmayne, 1686). [Online]. Retrieved on 27 July 2009 from: http://www.furthark.com/hanseaticleague/src_pri_sea-laws.shtml.
Mollat, M. (ed.), Course et piraterie: études présentées à la Commission internationale d'histoire maritime à l'occasion de son XVe colloque international pendant le XIVe congrès international des sciences historiques (San Francisco, août, 1975), 2 vols. (Paris: Institut de recherche et d'histoire des textes, Centre national de la recherche scientifique, 1975).
Mollat, M., 'De la piraterie sauvage à la course réglementée (XIVe-XVe siècle)', Mélanges de l' École française de Rome, 87 (1975): 7–25.
Mollat, M., 'Essai d'orientation pour l'étude de la guerre de course et la piraterie (XIII-XV siècles)', Anuario de estudios medievales, 10 (1980): 743–9.
Mollat, M., 'Guerre de course et piraterie à la fin du moyen-âge: Aspects économiques et sociaux: Positions de problèmes', Hansische Geschichtsblätter, 89–90 (1972): 1–14.
Morgan, G., 'The Byzantine Claims Commission of 1278', Byzantine Zeitschrift, 69 (1976): 411–38.
Mommsen, T., and Krueger, P. (eds.) and Watson, A. (Trans.), The Digest of Justinian, 4 vols. (Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 1985).
Mott, L. V., Sea Power in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Catalan-Aragonese Fleet in the War of the Sicilian Vespers (Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 2003).
Muntaner, Ramon, Crònica, V. J. Escartí (ed.), (Valencia: Institució Alfonso el Maganànim, 1999).
Mutges i Vives, J., 'La marca de Bernat Melhac, La Corona Catalano-Aragonesa i el Llenguadoc (1327–1336)', Anuario de estudios medievales, 16 (1986): 227–38.
Fra Niccolò da Poggibonsi, A Voyage Beyond the Seas, T. Bellorini and E. Hoade (Trans.), (Jerusalem: Franciscan Press, 1945).
Nys, E., La guerre maritime: Étude du droit internationale (Brussels: C. Muquardt, 1881).
Olgiati, G., 'Roman Muntaner e l'expedició del catalano a orient', Saggi e documenti, VI, Civico istituto colombiano, Studi e testi (Genoa: Civico Istituto Colombiano, 1985), 201–65.
Pardessus, J. M. (ed.), Collection des lois maritimes antérieures au XVIIIe siècle, 6 vols. (Paris, 1839, reedition Turin, 1960).
Perotin-Dumon, A., 'The Pirate and the Emperor: Power and the Law of the Sea, 1450-1850', in J. Tracy (ed.), The Political Economy of Merchant Empires (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1991), 196–227.
Priuli, G., I diarii, A. Segré and R. Cessi (eds.), 4 vols. (Città di Castello and Bologna: S. Lapi, 1912–1938).
Promis, V. (ed.), 'Statuti della colonia genovese di Pera', Miscellanea di storia italiana edita per curia della regia deputazione di storia patria per le antiche provincie e la Lombardia, XI (1871): 513–780.
Reddiker, M., Villains of All Nations: Atlantic Pirates in the Golden Age (Boston: Beacon Press, 2004).
Reyerson, K. L., 'Montpellier and Genoa: The Dilemma of Dominance', Journal of Medieval History, 20 (1994): 359–71.
Ritchie, R. C., Captain Kidd and the War Against the Pirates (Cambridge, Mass: Harvard University Press, 1986).
Roberts, S., Order and Dispute: An Introduction to Legal Anthropology (New York: Penguin, 1979).
Rovere, A., 'Un procedimento di rappresaglia contro Rodi (1388–1390)', Atii della Società Ligure Patria Storia, n.s. 23.2 (97) (Genoa: Società Ligure di Storia Patria, 1983), 67–88. [Online]. Retrieved on 2 September 2012 from: http://www.storiapatriagenova.it/BD_ASLi_ns_23_2.asp.
Rose, S., Medieval Naval Warfare, 1000–1500 (London: Routledge, 2002).
Rose, S., The Medieval Sea (London: Hambledon Continuum, 2007).
Rymer, T. (ed.), Foedora, Conventiones, Literae et cuiuscumque generis Acta Publica inter Reges Angliae et alios quosvis imperatores, reges, pontigices, principles vel communitates, A.D. 1100–1708, 20 vols. (London, 1708).
Rubin, A., The Law of Piracy (New York: Transnational Publishers, 1998).
Sanuto, M., 'I Diarii di Marino Sanudo', in N. Barozzi, R. Fulin and F. Stefani, et al. (eds.), 58 vols. (Venice: F. Visentini, 1879–1903). [Online]. Retrieved on 20 December 2011 from: http://www.archive.org/stream/idiariidimarino43sanugoog/idiariidimarino43sanugoog_djvu.txt.

Sassi, F., 'La guerra in corsa e il diritto di preda secondo il diritto veneziano', Rivista di storia del diritto italiano, 2 (1929): 99–128; 261-96.
Scott, S. P. (Trans.), The Civil Law (Cincinnati: The Central Trust Company, 1932). [Online]. Retrieved on 13 July 2010 from: http://www.constitution.org/sps/sps.htm.
Scott, S. P. (Trans.), and Burns R. I. (ed.), Las Siete Partidas, 5 vols. (Philadelphia: University of Philadelphia Press, 2001).
Seymour, J., 'The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea: A Great Mistake?' Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies 13/1 (2006): 1–35.
Shopkow, L. (Trans.), and Conlon D. J. (ed.), Li Romans de Witasse le Moine: Roman du treizième siècle (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1972). [Online]. Retrieved on 21 July 2012 from: http://www.courseportfolio.org/peer/potfolioFiles/anonF/shopkow-l-2003-1/eustace.htm.
Stanton, C. D., Norman Naval Operations in the Mediterranean (Woodbridge: The Boydell Press, 2011).
Stella, G., and Stella, G. Annales genuenses, G. Petti Balbi (ed.), Rerum italicarum scriptores, ser. 2, Raccolta degli storici italiani, 18.2, (Bologna: Zanichelli, 1975).
Tafur, Pero, Andaças é viajes de Pero Tafus por diversas partes del mundo avidos (1435–1439), 2 vols. (Madrid, 1874).
Tafur, Pero, Travels and Adventures (1435–1439), M. Letts (Trans. and ed.), (New York: Harper and Brothers, 1926). [Online]. Retrieved on 22 December 2011 from: http://depts.washington.edu/silkroad/texts/tafur.html.
Tai, E. S., 'Honor Among Thieves: Piracy, Restitution, and Reprisal in Genoa, Venice, and the Crown of Catalonia-Aragon, 1339–1417', Ph.D. diss. (Harvard University, 1996).
Tai, E. S., 'Marking Water: Piracy and Property in the Premodern West', in J. M. Bentley, R. Bridenthal and K. Wigen (eds.), Seascapes: Maritime Histories, Littoral Cultures, and Transoceanic Exchanges (Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 2007), 205–20 Expanded version also at: [Online]. Retrieved on 13 July 2009 from: http://www.historycooperative.org/proceedings/seascapes/tai.html.
Tai, E. S., 'Piracy and Law in Medieval Genoa: The Consilia of Bartolomeo Bosco', Medieval Encounters, 9/2-3 (2003): 256–82.
Tai, E. S., 'Restitution and the Definition of a Pirate', Mediterranean Historical Review, 19/2 (2004): 34–70.
Tamanaha, B. Z., 'A Non-Essentialist Version of Legal Pluralism', Journal of Law and Society 27/2 (2000): 296–321.
Tenenti, A., 'Venezia e la pirateria nel Levante: 1300c.–1460c', in A. Pertusi (ed.), Venezia e il Levante fino al secolo XV, 2 vols. (Florence: L. S. Olschki, 1973), vol. 1, 705–71.
Thomson, J. E., Mercenaries, Pirates, and Sovereigns: State-Building and Extra-Territorial Violence in Early Modern Europe (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1994).
Twiss, T. (ed.), Monumenta Juridica: The Black Book of the Admiralty, 5 vols., Rerum Britannicarum Medii Aevi Scriptores, n. 55 (London, 1874; reprinted Kraus Reprints, Ltd., 1975).
Unali, A., Il 'Libre de acordament': arruolamento di equipaggi catalani per la guerra di corsa nel Quattrocento, Centro di studi italo-iberici, no. IV (Cagliari: Edizioni Della Torre, 1982).
Unali, A., Marinai, pirati, e corsari, Studi e testi di storia medieovale, 6 (Bologna: Cappelli, 1983).
United Nations Convention on the High Seas (UNCLOS). [Online]. Retrieved on 2 September 2012 from: http://www.un.org/depts/los/convention_agreements/texts/unclos/part7.htm.
Weber, M., Economy and Society: An Outline of Interpretative Sociology, G. Roth and C. Wittich (eds.), 3 vols. (New York: Bedminister Press, 1968; reprinted Berkeley and Los Angeles, California: University of California Press, 1978). [Online]. Retrieved on 2 September 2012 from: http://books.google.com/books?id=pSdaNuIaUUEC&dq=Max+Weber+Economy+and+Society&printsec=frontcover&source=bl&ots=Up5epNENqj&sig=NsdnqMWlRBeOWuao1TXM79j5UQ0&hl=en&ei=OGFuSqusL8-GmQeFw8njBQ&sa=X&oi=book_result&ct=result&resnum=6#v=onepage&q=Max%20Weber%20Economy%20and%20Society&f=false.
Ziegler, K. H., 'The Influences of Medieval Roman Law on Peace Treaties', in R. Lesaffer (ed.), Peace Treaties and International Law in European History: From the Late Middle Ages to World War I (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2004), 147–61.